PLAINTIFF'S AFFADAVIT IN OPPOSITION TO DEFENDANT'S SCRANTON MAY 0 1 2003

Phan Hue, Pro Se, declares under penalty of prejur PER

- 1. I am the Plaintiff in the above-entitled case. I make this declaration in opposition to defendants, motion for summary judgement as to their retaliation, deliberate indifference to my serious medical need, and official pressure.
- 2. The defendants has made no claim in their motion or brief in support thereof that there are no material facts in dispute. However, in reality there are man; facts in dispute.
- 3. The defendants claim in their brief in suport of their motion for summary judgement that defendants Hazlak and O'Brien should be granted summary judgement as to Plaintiff's claim of retaliation in connection with being forced to work. Plaintiff disagree and oppose this contention. Plaintiff's allegations of retaliation should be sustained because he has establish a causal link between the violation of his constitutional right to be free from cruel and unusual punishment and his being made to work. It is a fact that Plaintiff has a constitutionally protected right from the Eight 1 Amendment to be free from cruel and unusual punishment. The adverse action by defendants Hazlak and O'Brien violated Plaintiff's Eighth Amendment right when he was forced to work by these two defendant, following an injury he sustained while working and punishing him for refusing to work because of his insistence on medical treatment. The action taken by Hazlak and O'Brien describe in Plaintiff's complaint clearly violated Plaintiff's Eighth Amendment right to be free from cruel and unusual punishment necessary to establish retaliation. Defendant Hazlak's action in imposing additional work duties as a result of the informal resolution of my misconduct served only to aggravate injuries sustained in the fall, diminish any credibility of Plaintiff's complaints concerning my injuries and were in recaliation for refusing to work initially. Likewise, defendant O'Brien's action referred to in Plaintiff's complaint were in retaliation for refusing to work and prohibit any further complaints including civil.

- 4. The defendants claim in their brief in support of their motion for summary judgement that defendant Mataloni should be granted summary judgement as to Plaintiff's claim of deliberate indifference to serious medical need. Plaintiff disagree and oppose this contention. Plaintiff has stated a claim of deliberatee indifference to serious medical need against defendant matalon. In fact, Plaintiff sinjury sustained in the fall on February 28, 2000, while working in the prison kitchen was diagnosed by a physician and was obvious to any layperson who observed the fall.
- 5. The defendants claim in their brief in support of their motion for summary judgement that defendants O'Brien and Hazlak should be granted summary judgement as to Plaintiff's claim that they were deliberately indifferent to his serious medical needs when they forced him to work. These two defendant further stated that even if it is assumed that the Plaintiff was not able to perform his job duties, it could not be foreseer by defendants Hazlak and O'Brien that Plaintiff was in danger of serious medical need when they forced him to work. Plaintiff disagree. In fact, Deliberate indifference may be established by showing that prison staff were aware of a "substantial risk" to Plai hiff's safety but failed to take reasonable action to protect him from it. Such is the instant case. A brief look at Plaintiff's stature in conjunction with the duties assigned the day of his fall should have alerted the kitchen staff that there was a substantial risk of injury. Therefor, under the Eighth Amendment the defendants are liable for denying humane conditions of confinement where they knew or should have known that Plaintiff faced substantial risk of serious harm and failed to take reasonable measures to remedy the situation.

6. The defendants claim in their brief in support of their motion for summary judgement that defendant O'Brien should be granted summary judgement as to Plantiff's claim that he used official pressure to see to it that Plaintiff's injury was not recognized and made to work Plaintiff disagree and oppose this contention. In fact, If you refuse to follow an order, even if the order is illegal, prison officials can use force to make you comply with that order. Even when an order appears to constitute a violation of a prisoner's constitutional right, courts have rejected the right to resist such an order. The Court recognized one exception to the general rule that prisoners may never resist orders, a prisoner might resist an illegal order to protect himself from immediate, irreparable and permanent physical or mental damage or death. Here, Defendant O'Brian's claim that he did not force Plaintiff to work is without merit given the policy he relies upon to issue a misconduct if Plaintiff failed to show for work. Plaintiff has no history of refusing any other order nor has Plaintiff ever refused to work. In fact Plaintiff's work history is diametrically opposed to the conduct attributed to Plaintiff except where Plaintiff felt, as he did here, that he was protecting himself from immediate, in eparable and permanent harm. The actions taken by Defendant O'Brien was consistent with one ecercising official pressure because it was available to him in an effort to avoid liability for Plaintiff's injuries resulting from the unsafe environment.

7. The defendants chaim in their brief in support of their motion for summary judgement that corrections defendants' are emitted to summary judgement because they are entitled to qualified immunity. Plaintiff disagree. In fact, to be protected by qualified immunity, the official has to show either that it was objectively reasonable to believe his or her actions did not violate the law, or that the law was not clearly established at the time of the violation. Certainly, the defendants here knew that Plaintiff had a constitutional right to humane conditions of confinement and should have known the risk Plaintiff faced in the situation they placed him in. Likewise, the defendants know Plaintiff had a constitutionally protected right to be free from the cruel and unusual punishment suffered by Plaintiff by being forced to work while in extreme pain. Therefore, the defendants qualified immunity defense should fail.

8. In Higgins v. Correctional Medical Services of III., 178 F.3d 508 (7tl Cir. 1999), where evidence showed officials were not aware of inmate's pain due to a dislocated shoulder, there was no deliberate indifference. Here, each of the named defendants jnew of Plaintiff's injury and all were informed of Plaintiff's continued pain, yet required him under threat of misconduct, to continue to work.

- 9. Finally and additionally, Plaintiff believes and therefore avers that Dr. Hennigan's report will support his claims of injury resulting in continued pain.
- 10. The above factual disputes cannot be resolved without a trial.

WHEREFORE, defendants motion for summary judgement should be denied.
